The new year brought new opportunities to Power To Be! In addition to bringing our community together to enjoy all that nature has to offer, we've been working on expanding the accessibility of our programs and the reach of our resources with the support of our incredible partners. We've also been trying some new approaches with our programs and are rolling out our new structure that caters to progressive skill building and increased confidence in the outdoors. With an exciting event just around the corner, we can't wait to bring our community together to unite, support and celebrate the impact of Power To Be.

173 HOURS IN NATURE

PROGRAMS

This quarter, we introduced our exciting new program streams that are designed to fit the needs of our participants and set them on the right path to achieving their goals in the outdoors. We had fun in the snow, exploring peaks and valleys with snowshoeing programs, we saw participants advance their rock climbing, and we learned, played, and grew amongst the trees. We're looking forward to more sunny adventures this spring!

“ I always have a great experience when I volunteer. I keep doing it because no matter how I feel when I arrive, I always leave happy and content. The staff are supportive, the participants are fun, and being outside is therapeutic. I often feel like I get more out of it than I give. ”
